Creative Commons

Creators mark their creative work something other than "All Rights Reserved" to "Some Rights Reserved".

Creative Commons

Launched in 2002

Provides a set of free copyright licenses for public use

“Some Rights Reserved”

en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Creative Commons

Creative Commons

range of creative works available to build upon legally and to share.

creators decide which rights they reserve and which rights they waive for the benefit of others.

en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Creative_Commons

Creative Commons

spectrum of possibilities between full copyright (all rights reserved) and the public domain (no rights reserved).

help creators keep your copyright while inviting certain uses of their work—a “some rights reserved” copyright.

Public Domain

may be freely reproduced, distributed, transmitted, used, modified, built upon, or otherwise exploited by anyone for any purpose, commercial or non-commercial, and in any way

creativecommons.org/licenses/publicdomain/

All rights reserved

the right to publish a work is retained by the copyright holder.

en.wikipedia.org/wiki/All_rights_reserved

Creative Commons

grant some or all of your rights to the public while retaining other rights.

en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Creative_Commons

Attribution (by)

Let others copy, distribute, display, and perform your copyrighted work—and derivative works based upon it—but only if they give credit the way you request.

Share-Alike (sa)

Allow others to distribute derivative works only under a license identical to the license that governs your work.

No Derivative (nd)

Let others copy, distribute, display, and perform only verbatim copies of your work, not derivative works based upon it.

Non Commercial (nc)

Let others copy, distribute, display, and perform your work—and derivative works based upon it—but for noncommercial purposes only.

The new copyright policy both explicitly affirms the ownership interest of faculty and students in their academic works and encourages management of their copyrights in a manner that enables broad access to others, whether within the university community or beyond. The new policy provides a platform from which to create the broadest possible culture of intellectual entrepreneurship, locally, nationally, and internationally.
